Studies indicate that the earlier children are introduced to the water, the less likely they are to develop fear of the water and the more quickly they are able to develop physical skill. This class provides the ideal opportunity for infants and toddlers to become acclimated to an aquatic environment.

This class emphasizes water adjustment and motor skill development rather than learning to swim. The instructor acts as a leader, providing activities for the parent and child to work on during the class.

Parents / Guardians must get in the water with the child
